WILL TOSS COIN FOR NOMINATIONS

Forty Candidates Notified by County Commissioners that are Tied for Various Offices. Will Toss Penny on Saturday.

At the regular meeting of the County Commissioners on Friday the official count of the ballots cast at the recent primary election was gone over and it found that no less than forty ties had occurred between the various county township offices.

In order to obey the regular custom the Commissioners decided to send out notices to all the candidates involved by the ties, notifying them to appear at the Court House on Saturday to toss a penny to decide the matter. In some cases several received just one vote more than their opponent and as in York Springs where ten men received one vote each. In this case a democratic committee for school director.

The ties will be decided by the toss of a penny, and the decision is finally reached.

On Thursday the County Commissioners will go to Aspers to confer with the election officers over the position of the new state highway which runs through that town and the bridge which will replace the one which collapsed last summer.

TO STOP BLIGHT

The field corps of the State Chestnut Tree Blight Commission will work during the next few days to locate definitely the western limit of the tree blight and before the end of the week the corps working north and east will probably meet in the Susquehanna Valley in the vicinity of Duncannon, it is now a penny, and the decision is town's penny, and the decision is finally reached.

The plan adopted was for the commission's men to take the western limit of the blight in all counties, in which the commission's men in the field was working unsettled. The men in the field are from Erie, Perry, Perry, Union and Lycoming counties. They will work from the latter county and the corps which has entered Tioga, Potter and Bradford counties will be now coming south. When the line is established the eradication of the campaign will be pressed, as there are no funds for further work.

Adams county has not been afflicted to any extent thus far.

CHAPTER X.

A HARD TASK.

As already indicated, up to this time there had been the slightest ease as to means and motives for our combination of forces.

"It is just here," he said, "that your invention ought to prove invaluable. The first thing to do is to find out where he harbors. That once known, I will give you plenty of help to run him down."

"I'll try it, sir," replied promptly.

"And you'll not disappoint me," he returned with a most engaging smile.

The principals were then clasp of hand. I'll see that you are from this moment detailed for special service. As soon as you can get ready come to me here, and we'll discuss the ways."

I hurried to my boarding place and entertained my all but forgotten appetite.

I shall not give a long description of it between the covers of a book. It would not understand the technical terms. The principle, however, was simple.

The object being to locate the origin of the electrical waves by means of telegraphy and telephony, the first requirement was to determine their direction of transmission. This I had effected by means of a small magnetic needle, which had the property of setting itself exactly at right angles to the axis of the incoming waves. To the latter ordinarily in all directions from a center it was only necessary to put two of my instruments a long distance apart and note their indications.

I can make this clearer with the aid of a little diagram—thus:

Suppose that C represents the center from which the waves radiate and that one of my needles is placed at A and another at B. Then, by reasoning the direction and the inclination to one another at the radial lines CA and CB and the direction of the dotted line joining them and knowing the distance between A and B, I have all the elements needed for a simple trigonometrical calculation which will give the location of the point C. This, however, applies only in the case where the waves are sent out "radiferously" on all sides. They are "sorted" waves, which are now almost universally employed by way of the time of which I am writing, I had not yet begun to make experiments in that direction. Suffice it to say that I shall in next either simultaneously or at no interval apart, transmit 3 separate waves to A and B. This being done, the result is the same as in the illustration of C being determined.

In the latter case a single instrument will suffice, being used first at A and then at B.

I knew that the law described mathematically would be easily supplied, and so I have already explained. Payton was sending "directed" waves to Mr. Grayman, although the intent to receive was unsuspected. Therefore between Payton would not distribute themselves, and the wave of force would go out on all sides in order to find me. The only problem for us I saw would be to induce the wave of force secrete to succession from the same point with two instruments at least.

As soon as he should have done that I knew that I could "spot" him.

Having thought out and forbidden myself to say anything to make sure that it was in good working order, I returned with it to Mr. Grantham's office. The secretary was summoned to my acquaintance of the division.

"Mr. Grantham," I explained plainly, "I have come in the interest of Grayman. I have invented an instrument which will tell me the direction from which the wave of force is coming, and, young man, your fortune is made. Do you know what Mr. Grayman will do to reward you for securing his discovery?"

"No, sir; I haven't thought about that."

"Well, I don't know, either," he replied, with a quaintly Mr. Grantham would have thought about it, and I know that I do, myself."

Then he handed me a note, which I read with considerable surprise. But, suddenly recollecting myself, I gave him the first train for New York," he said, "there is no time to be lost. Payton will communicate tomorrow, and we must be on the spot to receive him in readiness."

The next morning Mr. Grantham and I went together in an auto from our office, and there I left him, in the middle of the night, to Mr. Grayman's office.

"This is Lieutenant Afan," said Mr. Grayman, greeting me in his very courteous manner. "I have already told you about the nature and expectation of it, but he is not going to tell us. He has brought along a little instrument which, I believe, will do the business for Mr. Afanne Mr. Grayman pour machina and tell him what you can do."

"The great billionaire spoke to me and I repeated my invention as the secretary had done.

"But how," he asked, after a moment's reflection, "can you tell that Dave Payton is send two messages to different stations, and by how he do know that he will send them from his own?"

I had already noticed that at out, Grayman," replied the secretary. "On the day that I left Payton's employment from his 'lodge'—for I judge by your question that you have not yet been in his lie—I believe that there is very little question that he will go as a routine to entertain her and to tell his unsuspecting employer, by the way, one more important business than the rest. Therefore, you will be sure to have by asking for news of your friend."

"Then, as he probably will send two messages, that will be easy. Lieutenant Afan will have only to wait to select a place for the second communication at a considerable distance from New York, in order to be sure of hearing both messages. I am strongly inclined that Payton's place is somewhere in the Rocky Mountain range, as the Pike Ridge although, of course, we cannot both messages from the indication of the marks, but it is not likely to be such another away—Dublin, Australia—to serve our turn.

"All that you have to do, then, will be to intercept Payton after he has sent the message to his employer, and, keep track to enable Afan to determine the direction of the wave and tell him that a sudden impervious call has transpired, and we shall be on the spot, and then control. Tell him that you would you have sent him to the Pike Pass and arranged the affair that you have to be in readiness to go to the Pike Pass and arrange the affair that you have to be in readiness to go to the Pike Pass and arrange the affair that you have to be in readiness to go to the Pike Pass and arrange

MUCH INTEREST IN ST. JAMES

New Lutheran Church Visited Daily by Many Interested in Its Progress. Gallery almost Reached by Brick Layers.

With only two more courses of bricks remaining to be laid before the floor of the church will be reached, and with the brick work at the front of the building rapidly approaching the comb of the roof, the appearance of the new St. James Lutheran church is when completed, can be readily imagined at this time.

The tower at the corner has gone up steadily and in a few days work on the belfry will be started. The appearance on the front of the church will soon be thorough with their gable and the work the task of putting on the roof will be started in the near future and it will be but a short time until operations at the building will be confined to the interior.

Delays throughout the summer and fall caused by the unusually frequent rains in the so we can be worked from time to time until an aggregate of several weeks loss had to be made up. The men to plan the structural steel were delayed a great deal by this and by many people who have been following its progress with much interest, it will be a surprise to many how now noticeable will soon so many more than that of the old church. The tower room, as it is known, is expected to accommodate 700 while the old church was not supposed to seat more than about 450. The difference lies in the fact that the auditorium will be on two feet wider and considerably longer than the old church. The appearance of the interior with all the scaffolding at present removed, is one which will increased also over that of the old St. James.

EXPECT BIG GAME

The Carlisle Herald says: "Dickinson College is looking for a big day when Dickinson will plink battle with the Gettysburg collegians on Biddle field here on Saturday afternoon. This is always the biggest home game of the year and this year will be no exception. Coach Foster Forrest K. Craver, of the College, has been working hard and the Dickinsburg gores is the only home game in which Dickinson does not guarantee expenses, money being lost on all other home contests. The battle-field conditions will note here what at least three hundred rooters, and probably a band or a dozen corps, and will secure the entire side of the gridiron. There will be a display of colors and vesting of much enthusiasm on the athletic day. A number of blocks on alumni will come back to see the battle."

ITALY ORDERS ARMY ADVANCE

Forces Will Move to Interior of Tripoli.

MORE TROOPS ARE LANDED

Great Crowds Cheer as Second Division of Army Comes into Port—Report of Armistice Denied.

Tripoli, Oct. 15.—With the arrival of nineteen transports, bringing the second part of the Italian army expeditionary corps to occupy Tripoli, General Caneva, commander-in-chief at the Italian forces, it appears, has ordered an immediate advance against the positions occupied by the Turks in the interior.

The landing on account of the transports the landing of the troops, artillery, ammunition and horses was begun. When the ships were sighted the forts saluted and the cannon finally were run up over the fortifications and principal buildings of the town.

Great crowds of Europeans and natives in characteristic costume, soldiers and soldiers gathered on the shore. Entering the harbor cheers from the transports could be heard replying to the noisy welcome from the land. Every one was armed with rifles, bats and handkerchiefs.

Rome, October 15.—Commandant Capoi, Major Heenzet Kermanelli and several Army officers from the port would personally welcomed the officers of the troops upon their arrival. Everything was conducted unpublicly.

A part of the troops landed will be sent to occupy Benghazi and Derna.

Rome Denies Armistice.

Rome, Oct. 15.—That an armistice has been arranged between Italy and Turkey is denied in official circles. It is strenuously denied by the Italian government.

A dispatch from Tripoli to the Giornale D'Italia says that the Italian governments, being unable to communicate directly with Enver Bey, Turkish commander of the former Turkish garrison at Tripoli, has transmitted to the Turkish consuls at Tunis and Malta to forward to Enver Bey as soon as possible.

Diplomatic reports have reached the Italian government stating that a Turkish force has been completed on the interior railroad, which connects Tripoli with Lesser Egypt and Syrta, were sent to the front to reinforce the troops at the bar.

Advices received in Rome from Tripoli state that the Italian governor, General Ameglio, has been obliged to expel several Maltese who have been found to be spies and who have shown a disposition to resist the Italian rule in Tripoli.

Soldiers have now replaced the soldiers on duty at the various posts, who have been retained to several miles from Tripoli.

News from the interior is contradictory. Some reports say that Enver Bey, Mr. Pasha, and other leaders of the Turks, is about to surrender, while according to other reports they have a large army in preparation to resist Italian invasion.

The population of Tripoli is being gradually calmed daily. Not only are the residents returning, but there are many mohammedans who have been attracted by the business opportunities afforded by the presence of a large body of soldiers and sailors.

The Corriere Della Sera says that the government is opposed absolutely to withdrawing Turkey's flag from Tripoli.

TIDAL WAVE WRECKS TOWNS

Wall of Water Twenty Feet High Swept Everything Before It.

Mexico City, Oct. 15.—Hundred and thousands of tons of water cast up by the terrific earthquake in the state of California, the cities of San Jose de Guatemala, Ocos, Champerico and Retalhuleu, state of Guatemala, were destroyed, and Quayaves, Alaya and Mazatenango were terribly damaged by the same wave, which lost some of its force by the time it reached Tapachula.

The earthquake occurred in the middle of the night, almost all of those in the inhabitants of the coast towns had time to warn others, spread the earth tremors a base wall of water, twenty feet high, swept in from the sea, carrying everything before it.

Hills and houses were swept by the land and deposited half a mile or more on the sand dunes of the beach.

The survivors, almost all of whom are suffering from broken arms or legs, tell heartrending tales of the moment when the huge wave struck the sleeping towns and men and women were drowned in their beds or crushed beneath the falling wreckage.

HANOVER LOSES OLD CRIER

On Saturday Hanover lost the oldest and most remarkable piece of furniture in America, when the famous Hanover ore chair, which has seen five centuries, was engraved in Engelsberg, the home of Joseph Parker Bingley, of Hanover. Kept as a curiosity, the ancient chair has been passed down from father to son for over 200 generations. J. Edward Bingley, of Baltimore, is the present owner, he is the coronet critic.

The chair is a massive piece of work. Made in Yorkshire, England, in 1400. It represents the type of architecture popular in those days. The chair is inlaid with various kinds of wood, was used in the coronation of Queen Mab in hardscrawl carved, and at the top figures of birds are carved. The joints are morticed and tenoned and held together with copper pegs.

Sixty two years before Columbus discovered America the chair was built, and it remained in the town of Bingley, owned from father to son until the present owner, during the reign of twenty English monarchs, from Henry VI to Victoria. It is 627 by 1400 and Leeds it was taken to Manchester.

In 1834 the historic piece of furniture was brought to this country on the ship Ann Parker, and was landed here at Baltimore, Md. During the Civil War the chair was taken to Canada, where the owner temporarily left it in the care of a friend while he returned to the North. Subsequently it was taken to Watertown N. Y., and in 1894 was brought to Hanover.

Many offers were made for the coronation chair before it was taken out of this country and it has been sought after for exhibition at the Independence Hall, Philadelphia, but the Bingleys were loath to part with it, and for the last many times been taken to public meetings and over the country exhibited after. When Governor S. W. Penny-packer was in Hanover at the time the prosecution address at the unveiling of the Betzie monument in 1905, he took great pleasure in occupying the old chair. Many other distinguished persons have sat in it and people have come great distances expressly to see this prize antique.

FULTON'S SHERIFF IS FOUND GUILTY

Sheriff Norris, of Fulton County, Found Guilty on Charge of Allowing Prisoner, Accused of Burglarizing, to Escape.

Jefferson Norris, Sheriff of Fulton county, was on Friday found guilty of the criminal charge of permitting a prisoner to escape through gross neglect of duties. The prisoner was Russel Sipes, jailed for arson.

During the past few months a number of robberies have been turned in by Connellsburg all supposed to have been the work of an incendiary, the last being the large Dodson stable in the central part of the town, and the fire was such as to destroy the destruction of the greater part of the town. Immediately after the Dodson fire a detective was employed, and soon circumstances evidence was secured to warrant the arrest of Russell Sipes.

Before the warrant was served Sipes appeared before the Magistrate and offered to enter bail for his appearance but as the Magistrate had no authority to take bail, at the request of the District Attorney Lyons, a commitment was made out and handed to the Sheriff. On the evening of the fire the prisoner was still used to go at large; and it is the most natural for the jailer had seized such an outcry against the Sheriff that he was arrested by a writ of the Magistrate and lift the commitment, which he did and soon had the prisoner lodged in jail. Before daylight of the same day, however, the prison doors were opened and the prisoner was free.

The day following his escape from jail it is said the prisoner was seen in company with the Sheriff in the latter's home, and at other places; but the Sheriff declared that him in jail and he is still at large.

DRIVING ACCIDENT ON TOWN STREETS

Henry Boyd, of Goldens, and his Daughter Thrown from Vehicle when Bicycle Rider Collides with Rear Wheel Horse.

The collision of an unknown bicycle rider and a blind horse on West Bridge street Monday afternoon resulted in a runaway in which Henry Boyd, of Goldens Station, and his daughter, Miss Lulu Boyd, were thrown from the vehicle in which they were riding. Mr. Boyd being rather severely injured.

They were returning from Fairfield, their former home, to Goldens and were driving on Middle street. As they crossed Washington street four young men on bicycles, who had been getting at a very rapid pace, came down the street and one of them, attempting to swing the team run straight into the horse. The bicycle rider was not hurt and disappeared immediately after the accident.

The horse, which was blind, naturally became frightened and when Mr. Boyd could bring it under control had run up on the sidewalk on the home of Otis G. Freighner, throwing out both of the occupants. Mr. Boyd's head struck the stone steps and the wagon passed over him. The horse was stopped only after it had run into the market was in front of the new home of C. Whitney & Sons.

The workmen there found Miss Boyd tangled up in the wheels, but not seriously hurt. Both she and her father were taken to Dr. J. H. Clubb's office, where Mr. Boyd was attended. His shoulder was dislocated and he received a bad scalp wound. Dr. Clubb also reports that

SHOW CALLED OFF

The management of the Citizens' Band, feeling that "Jo Hamilton's Country Store," the home talent entertainment booked for Thursday and Friday evenings at the Wizard Theatre, would not meet the approval of Gettysburg's theatre goers, have decided to cancel the attraction.

LOOKS FAVORABLE FOR YORK PIKE

Committee and Representative Auto Interest State Highway Commissioner in Road from Gettysburg to New Oxford.

John D. Keith, Esq., and Robert C. Miller of the committee appointed at the meeting of citizens held at the Hotel Gettysburg several weeks ago to interview the State Highway Commissioner Bigelow relative to the improvement of the York pike between Gettysburg and New Oxford met Mr. Bigelow at Harrisburg on Thursday and went to all his interests that he would visit Gettysburg next week to meet citizens of the town and go over the road.

Mr. Keith and Mr. Miller were accompanied by Representative James C. Cole and were cordially received by the Commissioner. The committee pointed out the facts concerning the condition of the road, which are so well known to all people of the town and vicinity and anyone who has traveled over the highway for several years, and Mr. Bigelow was told also that the road should not remain in its present condition over the winter months.

Mr. Bigelow was much interested in the matter, more so in view of the large amount of traffic over the road, and stated that it is a part of the road to Philadelphia and, before the coming winter, he proposed to come to Gettysburg next week to meet the citizens of the town.

DAINTY COLLARS AND SMART CUFFS.

Even the Expensive Sets May Be Duplicated at Home.

The modern girl is so pleased with the lace and embroidery collars of the day that she will continue to wear them throughout the winter on her crepe and tweed suits. They are made of fine linen and lawn and cambric and are embroidered, tucked or trimmed with lace.

Cuffs are made to match, and the tabbed frill that adorns one side of the collar is very often included in the set.

The shops show many very lovely odd sets. But some of these are beyond the purse of the average girl and she need not be discouraged, however, for the duplicate of these sets can easily be made at home.

Purchase a collar and cuff pattern and if it does not exactly fit find the paper over at the neck line until it does. Pin or baste it that way and you have a guide by which almost any shape collar can be cut.

Use fine linen or batiste, lay the pattern on and cut out. Then after this is done it can be laid out flat and trimmed to any way you desire with lace or embroidery. If you want it embroider the outer edge with it with a scalloped edge and some pretty scroll design all the way around and work it with white mercerized cotton. If lace is used as a trimming, have two rows of insertion placed one inch apart on the edge and then a row of narrow lace all the way around.

Where there is used having bands of lace insertion and a fine lace edge makes the prettiest set of all. It may be used for cuffs and, of course, for the collar. Cut the cuffs in the shape you want them and cut the collar the same way, except that it is cut straight piece to fit the neck and not in a round piece, gradualting in width to two inches at the lower end. It is trimmed on the edge, as is the collar. Lay the cuffs on the lace, the points and bind it with a half inch band of beading. Pin or baste it before the lace is put in the front of the blouse.

The lace is then put in neck. Measure the width of your sleeve and cut the insertion that much and lay under your darts. Trim in the same manner as the collar. Then cut a piece of lace that turns under the sleeve with an inch to spare and sew it under the cuffs.

When such pretty things are so easy to make it is unnecessary that you will not dress dainty cross occasions.

WHO WILL BE HERO OF SERIES?

In Every World's Contest Some Star's Playing Has Shone.

WAYNE MATTY OR BENDER.

Two Great Pitchers Will Lock Horns in Coming Game—Latter Has an Old Score to Settle—History of Those Who Starred in Big Series.

Not the least interesting feature of the world's series of the past has been the flashing of some star or stars in the firmament of baseball. Depicts different players at considerable length of pleasure, not to say interest, to wonder during who will be the next star that will dazzle a multitude and sparkle to fame.

In the first world's series, played between the National and Pittsburg teams in 1903, it was Bill Dinneen the left handed pitcher who was the star. He pitched three games and won them all. In 1905 when the New York baseball Philadelphia for the premier honors of the diamond, Billy Gilbert's great left arm was called upon to do considerable pitching were the features. In 1906 Orval Overa's work at third and particularly at the bat, made the Chicago Americans' victory certain over the Cubs. Frank Isbell of the Chicago White Sox was another to shine that year. It was his four two base hits in the fifth game of the series that helped to put the Cubs to rout.

O'Leary and Donahue of the Detroits were the heroes of the Tiger games in 1907. In 1908 Johnny Kling of the Chicago Cubs was the star. He caught three games, batted for .400 and scored four runs. Ed Reulbach of the Chicago Cubs was the star pitcher of 1909. It was he who pitched the first game of the series that Detroit lost. In 1910 it was Jack Coombs of the Philadelphia Athletics who starred. He pitched two games and won them both. In 1911 Chief Bender of the Philadelphia Athletics was to play for the premier baseball honors, who will be the star of the series?

Of course no one can dope it out, but many experts think that it will be Matthewson or Bender. The latter has an old score to settle. In 1908 Matty defeated Bender in the first game and the Indian is out for revenge. Bender is in his usual condition and Matthewson's is one time as often as possible. Both are veterans of many world series. New York fans are looking to see Mc-Graw win second money in "Big Six" to deliver the goods. Though no doubt the two twirlers will do more than anything else to decide the series, apparently most fans of the game will look to see the Red Sox outfielders play may spring into eternal fame. Who will it be?

History of the World's Series.

The beginning of the world's series may be the seventh clash between the baseball champions of the National league clubs' champions.

The first series was played in 1884 between the Providence and New York clubs, and was won by the former. The first series from the Polo Grounds in 1888. The Chicago Nationals were then termed in and redeemed themselves by whipping the Detroit Americans in 1907 and 1908.

In 1909 the Pittsburg baseball team beat the Detroit Americans. Last year the Athletics defeated the Chicago Nationals.
